

Mission

Art enhances the life of everyone and by extension, artists enhance the life of the community in which they live.

This studio will continue building on an already vibrant and relevant artist community by providing an open printmaking studio where artists can collaborate, share ideas and share in the burden of equipment costs and studio space.

Art should enhance the lives of people and the process of creating art should not degrade the environment in which people live. D.M. Penny Press will strive to create an environmentally conscious printmaking facility.

Non-Toxic Print Making Studio

About D.M. Penny Press

D.M. Penny Press was named after my grandfather, who was a letterpress printmaker his entire life, starting at the age of 13. It was his life long commitment to the art that inspired me to try printmaking.

My name is David Gray. I am an artist and an engineer. I have been printmaking since 2012.

In 2015 I decided to expand my small basement studio and create my own printmaking studio in Manchester NH where I would have more space to explore different areas using as non-toxic methods as possible.

My studio is open to other printmakers for both short and long term. See Membership for more information.
